

TEAMS GRADED up clay from the open pit mine, dragged the load to this trap where horse drawn railroad cars would carry it to the Provo Press Brick yard. This picture was taken in 1911 and the mine was located on 200 West, about where the Reams Warehouse market is now located. The mill was located to the North.

In Utah Valley

Horse-and-Buggy: Era Of Pioneering, Growth

A GOOD HORSE was appreciated for more than the work to be gotten from him. Here at the Utah County Horse Show, held April 13, 1906, residents admire and judge on a pleasant afternoon. Note the old Taylors Building across the lot and across Center St. in downtown Provo. This was about the time when the Provo Enquirer was in its last years and just before the Provo Herald came on the scene as the successor to the Utah County Democrat.

CENTENNIAL EDITION

The Daily  Herald